Getting Started

Trying to get your PROCESS PROJECT off the ground? Without a compelling reason for doing them, Process Projects get kicked down the road, quarter after quarter. Instead, focus first on prioritizing. Clarity creates energy and focus.

The Secret: FIND THE FIRE. The Visionary has a “pet rock” every quarter. That’s the highly important project that simply MUST get done. It’s like a fire. It’s either a BIG PROBLEM or a BIG OPPORTUNITY. Tie into that for your first Process Project and you’ll get the resources, energy, and drive from your biggest and best project driver; your Visionary. Once Process is in motion, it’s easier to keep the momentum.

To help with this challenge, here is a simple tool for prioritizing your Playbooks:

1. Begin by listing out a maximum of twelve areas of the business that need to be Playbook’d.
2. Assign a check mark score to each Playbook based on the following criteria:
 - Urgency: Is it URGENT and Important? Or simply Important. Urgency is essential.
 - ROI Potential: Will there be a significant return on investment of time and energy?
 - Visionary Priority: does this project align with their perspective of priority?
 - Process Documented: Has there been any documentation or mapping?
 - Subject Matter Experts (SMEs) Identified: Do you have right person for this?
3. Add up the check marks for each Playbook to determine which ones have the highest scores.
4. Select the top three Playbooks with the highest scores and rank them in order of priority.
5. Assign a KPI (performance metric) to the three playbooks to ensure you have a measure of success.

By following this process, you can prioritize your Playbooks and tackle them in a more organized and efficient manner.
